

Well-being Conversations 2026

Help shape the future of Gwynedd and Anglesey

We are asking people who live, work, or spend time in Gwynedd or Anglesey to share their views.

What you tell us will help shape the Well-being Assessment for Gwynedd and Anglesey, and the priorities *public organisations focus on in the future. This is your chance to help influence decisions that affect everyday life.

Why are we doing this?

Public bodies in Wales must plan for the long term and think about future generations.

To do this well, we need to understand what is working well now, what is not working so well, and what people want life to be like in the future. Your experiences, ideas and concerns matter.

Who can take part?

Anyone can take part, including residents, community groups, businesses, council staff, partners, organisations and young people.

You can share your views on your own, as part of a group, or in a meeting you already attend. There is no right or wrong answer.

When people talk together in a group, everyone should be kind and respectful. People may have different views and experiences, and that is okay.

Everyone should have a chance to speak. Conversations should be calm, friendly and inclusive.

*Complete list of Gwynedd and Anglesey PSB's Public Organisation members can be found at the end of the document.

The questions we would like you to discuss

You can answer as many or as few questions as you like.

We'd appreciate it if you could include your full postcode when responding so we can identify which well-being area you live in, and so your response can be included in the well-being assessment for the correct area. It won't be used to identify you.

Please note your full postcode

1. What is good about your area?

Think about your local area or community, places you value, and services or activities that make a positive difference. What works well? Is there enough use of Welsh within the services?

2. What would you like to change in your area in the future?

Think about your family and friends, a child born today, and what life might be like in 2060 and beyond. What would a good life in your area look like? Is there enough use of Welsh within the services?

3. What challenges does your area face?

Think about what is not working well, who is most affected, and why these challenges exist. Is there enough use of Welsh within the services?

4. How could things be improved?

What needs to change, who could help to make these changes, and how will we know that we have succeeded. Is there enough use of Welsh within the services?

What will happen to your views?

We will combine what you tell us with other information and evidence and use it to help write the Well-being Assessment.

We will publish a summary of what people told us and how it influenced the assessment.

The draft Well-being Assessment will be consulted on in Winter 2026 to 2027 and published in Spring 2027.

Optional questions about you

At the end of the survey there are some optional questions about you. These help us understand who is taking part and where we may need to do more to reach other groups. You do not have to answer these questions.

Thank you

Thank you for taking the time to share your views. What you tell us will help shape the Well-being Plan for Gwynedd and Anglesey for current and future generations.

Current list of Gwynedd & Anglesey PSB Public Organisations

The Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015 has established a Public Services Board for every local authority area in Wales to ensure that public bodies work together to create a better future for the people of Wales. The Gwynedd and Anglesey Public Services Boards have decided to work together as one Board to ensure that public organisations across the area work together to create a better future for the people of Gwynedd and Anglesey.

The Public Services Board must assess the well-being of our area and create a Well-being Plan with the aim of improving the social, economic, environmental, and cultural well-being of our communities.
